2 Peter and Wendy

Warm up

Fill in the timeline with important events from your life.

_____'S TIMELINE

Discuss with your partner how you have grown and changed over the years.

Peter Pan was a mischievous young boy who spent his never-ending childhood with fairies, pirates and mermaids on the faraway, magical island of Neverland. He occasionally visited ordinary children too. One night, Peter was listening to Mrs Darling read bedtime stories to her children—Wendy, John and Michael. Suddenly their dog entered and sprung at Peter. Peter managed to escape, but his shadow was left behind. Let's read a story that describes how, a few days later, Peter waited till the children were asleep, and then returned with Tinker Bell, a fairy, to find his shadow.

The night-lights by the beds of the three children went out one by one.

There was another light in the room now, a thousand times brighter than the night-lights, going in and out of all the drawers in the nursery, looking for Peter's shadow, rummaging the wardrobe and turning every pocket inside out. It was not really a light; it made this light by flashing about so quickly, but when it came to rest for a second, you saw it was a fairy, no longer than your hand, but still growing. It was a girl called Tinker Bell dressed in a leaf gown.

faraway: distant nursery: (here) a room for the use of young children rummaging: searching carelessly through something

A moment after the fairy's entrance, the window was blown open by the breathing of the little stars, and Peter dropped in. He had carried Tinker Bell part of the way, and his hand was still messy with the fairy dust.

"Tinker Bell," he called softly, after making sure that the children were asleep, "Tink, where are you?"

She was in a jug for the moment, and liking it extremely; she had never been in a jug before. "Oh, do come out of that jug, and tell me, do you know where they put my shadow?"

The loveliest tinkle as of golden bells answered him. It is the fairy language. You ordinary children can never hear it, but if you were to hear it, you would know that you had heard it once before.

Tink said that the shadow was in the big box. She meant the chest of drawers, and Peter jumped at the drawers, scattering their contents to the floor with both hands. In a moment, he had recovered his shadow, and in his delight, he forgot that he had shut Tinker Bell up in the drawer.

If he thought at all, but I don't believe he ever thought, it was that he and his shadow, when brought near each other, would join like drops of water; and when they did not, he was surprised. He tried to stick it on with soap from the bathroom, but that also failed.

A shudder passed through Peter, and he sat on the floor and cried.

His sobs woke Wendy, and she sat up in bed. She was not alarmed to see a stranger crying on the nursery floor; she was only pleasantly interested.

"Boy," she said kindly, "why are you crying?"

Peter, having learned the grand manner at fairy ceremonies, rose and bowed to her beautifully. She was much pleased and bowed beautifully to him from the bed.

What had Peter learned from attending fairy ceremonies?

"What's your name?" he asked.

"Wendy Moira Angela Darling," she replied. "What is your name?"

messy: untidy fairy dust: (mythology) glittery magical powder that fairies are believed to have chest of drawers: a piece of furniture with drawers for keeping clothes in scattering: spreading recovered: found something that was lost or missing shudder: a series of shivering and shaking (due to fear) sobs: crying noises alarmed: afraid ceremonies: formal gatherings to celebrate important events

"Peter Pan."

It did seem a comparatively short name. "Is that all?"

"Yes," he said rather sharply. He felt for the first time that it was a short name. "I'm so sorry," said Wendy Moira Angela.

"It doesn't matter," Peter replied. She asked where he lived.

"Second to the right," said Peter, "and then, straight on till morning."

"What a funny address!"

Why does Peter's address seem 'funny' to Wendy? Do you feel the same?

Peter had a sinking feeling. For the first time he felt that perhaps it was a funny address. "No, it isn't," he said.

Then, Wendy saw the shadow on the floor, looking so draggled, and she felt sorry for Peter. "How awful!" she said, but she could not help smiling when she saw that he had been trying to stick it on with soap.

What does 'to feel sorry for someone' mean?

Fortunately, she knew at once what to do. "It must be sewn on," she said. "I shall sew it on for you," she said, and started sewing the shadow on to Peter's foot.

"I daresay it will hurt a little," she warned him.

"Oh, I shan't cry," said Peter, who was already of the opinion that he had never cried in his life. And he clenched his teeth and did not cry; and soon his shadow was behaving properly.

Peter was now jumping about in the wildest glee. Alas, he had already forgotten that Wendy was the one who attached his shadow. He thought he had attached the shadow himself. "How clever I am," he crowed. "Oh, the cleverness of me!"

Wendy was shocked. "You conceited boy!" she exclaimed, with sarcasm. "Of course I did nothing!"

sharply: angrily sinking feeling: an unpleasant feeling draggled: dirty, wet; something that has been trailing through mud I daresay: I dare to say; I think clenched: pressed together tightly glee: great delight alas: an expression used to show sadness crowed: boasted; talked proudly conceited: extremely proud of oneself; vain sarcasm: a way of saying the opposite of what one actually means

"You did a little," Peter said carelessly, and continued to dance.

"A little!" she exclaimed; and she sprang into bed and covered her face with the blankets.

Adapted from Peter Pan

Sir James Matthew Barrie (1860–1937) was a Scottish novelist and playwright (a person who writes plays). Barrie started writing stories like Peter Pan or The Boy Who Wouldn't Grow Up while making up stories about adventures with pirates and sailing to different islands to entertain children.

In this section, we will:
- learn the different elements of a story's plot structure.
- remember details about the story.

(C-1.2, C-2.1, C-2.2)

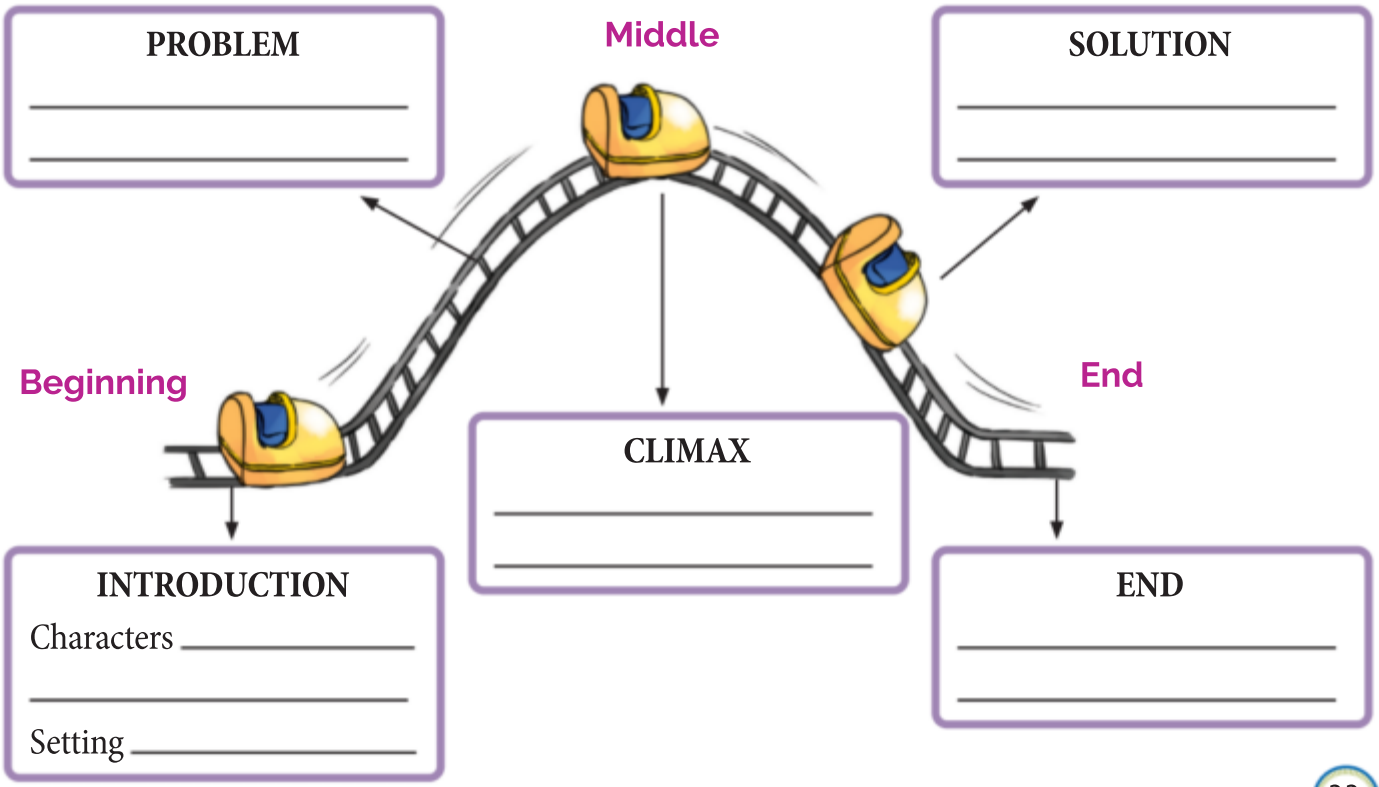
Make connections

Map the story

The plot of a story is often like a roller-coaster ride. The level of excitement goes up as the problem develops. It reaches a peak at the climax. This is the most tense or exciting part of the story. Then, the level of excitement goes down as the problem gets a solution and the story comes to an end.

Complete the graphic organizer given below based on your understanding of the story 'Peter and Wendy'.

STORY ROLLER COASTER



Deep dive

Answer the following questions with reference to context.

1. There was another light in the room now, a thousand times brighter than the night-lights, going in and out of all the drawers in the nursery, looking for Peter's shadow …

RECALL	INFER	ANALYSE
a. Who was the source of the bright light?	b. Why do you think 'the light' was looking for Peter's shadow at night instead of during the day?	c. Describe an incident from your life when you lost something valuable or important to you.

2. "How clever I am," he crowed. "Oh, the cleverness of me!"

RECALL	INFER	ANALYSE
a. Who thought that he was 'clever' and what was he doing as he said these lines?	b. What had this person forgotten?	c. What do these lines tell us about the person? If you were in his place, what would you have done?

Read, reflect and write

1. Give a description of Tinker Bell.
2. Why do you think Wendy covered her face with blankets at the end of the story?
3. Does this story seem real to you, or does it seem like a fantasy? Give reasons for your answer.

Integrate

1. When something blocks the light, a shadow is formed. Objects that do not allow light to pass through them are called opaque. Objects that allow light to pass through them are called transparent. Look around at the objects in your classroom, and find a few examples of opaque and transparent objects.
2. Do you know that only opaque objects can have shadows? On a sheet of paper, draw and record your shadow in the morning, in the afternoon and in the evening. Perform this activity outdoors. Make sure you stand in the same spot and face the same direction every time you make your recording. What difference did you find?

In this section, we will:
- learn how to use different sound words in a given context.
- identify words from the text using their descriptions. (C-4.2)

Word wall

Sound words

In the story, Tinker Bell responded to Peter Pan with the loveliest tinkle of golden bells.

Choose the right sound words from the box to complete the sentences below.

bawled	rustled	snored	sizzled	howled	drummed	tinkled	bellowed
	clattered	purred	popped	chattered	squawked	strummed

The vegetable fritters (1.) _____ in the wok. The popcorn crackled and (2.) _____. The ice-cubes (3.) _____ in the lemonade glasses. The paper (4.) _____ as the sandwiches were unwrapped. The dishes (5.) _____ as the cook piled them in the sink.

The children (6.) _____ excitedly. The baby (7.) _____ loudly. Aunty (8.) _____ on her guitar. Uncle (9.) _____ loudly. The dog (10.) _____ and the cat (11.) _____. A parrot (12.) _____ outside. The rain (13.) _____ down on the roof. My grandfather (14.) _____, "Quiet!" What a noisy house!

Words from the text

Use the descriptions to fill in the missing letters of the words from the text.

1. a small pouch sewn on clothing, used for carrying small articles — __ O __ __ __ __
2. large balls of burning gas found in space — __ __ __ R __
3. a dark area that forms when something blocks the light — __ H __ __ __ __
4. a large cupboard for hanging clothes in — W __ __ __ __ __ B __
5. an opening in the wall of a building to let in air and light — __ __ __ __ __ W
6. a large piece of (usually) woollen material used for giving warmth — __ __ A __ __ __ T
7. the details of a place where someone lives — __ __ D __ __ __ __
8. a set of hard, white objects used for biting and chewing food — __ __ __ T __

In this section, we will:
- learn how to use articles correctly.
- learn to differentiate between a/an and one. (C-3.4)

Grammar time

Articles

Read the given sentences.

- A girl called Tinker Bell searched for Peter Pan's shadow for an hour.
- She was not alarmed to see a stranger crying on the nursery floor.

The words a, an and the are articles.

ANCHOR CHART

ARTICLES AND THEIR TYPES

Articles are words placed before nouns to show whether the nouns are used in a particular or general sense.

Use of indefinite articles: a, an

- before singular nouns we can count
- when we do not refer to particular or specific nouns

A is used before a word that begins with a consonant sound.

- a tree
- a watch
- a unicorn

An is used before a word that begins with a vowel sound.

- an umbrella
- an igloo
- an heir

Use of definite article: the before either singular or plural nouns, countable or uncountable nouns.

- the trees I planted
- the man who helped me
- the water in the jug

to refer to something or someone that both speakers in a conversation know about or that has been referred to before.

- A woman rescued the shipwrecked sailors. The woman is from Chennai.

to refer to nouns that are unique—one of a kind.

- the sun
- the moon
- the internet
- the Olympics

Special uses of the

Although we generally do not use articles before proper nouns, we use the definite article before the names of the following:

certain books:

- the Ramayana
- the Holy Bible

well-known buildings:

- the Burj Khalifa
- the Eiffel Tower

landforms and water bodies:

- the Nile
- the Black Sea
- the Andes
- the Sahara Desert

countries whose names include words like kingdom, states or republic; countries which have plural nouns as their names :

- the United Kingdom
- the Netherlands

famous works of art:

- the Sunflowers by Van Gogh

families and titles given to people:

- the Jacksons
- the Wizard of Hockey

1. Read the sentences given below. If any of the articles are used incorrectly, rewrite the sentences in your notebooks using the correct articles.

a. Grandfather is going to buy the new coat.

b. An internet is a global system of computer networks.

c. We will return in an hour.

d. We went to see an Taj Mahal.

e. Father invited an Sharmas to dinner.

f. Florence Nightingale was known as a Lady with the Lamp.

2. Rewrite the paragraph in your notebook using a, an and the where necessary.

In 1952, Mary D'Souza had been selected to represent India at Helsinki Olympics but she had no funds; government was only paying airfare. So, her neighbours and friends organized dance to raise enough money. Mary was one of first four women to participate in Olympics. At first Asian Games held in New Delhi, Mary bagged silver medal in 43,100m relay and bronze medal in 200m sprint. She was also member of Indian Women's Hockey team. Mary D'Souza has been extraordinary athlete. She was awarded Dhyan Chand Award, India's highest award for lifetime achievement in sports and games.

ANCHOR CHART

When do we use a/an and when do we use one?

Read the given sentence.

- I borrowed a book from the library.

When we write 'a book', we mean 'one book'. So, we use a and an to mean one—referring to a single object or person.

- I'd like a mango and two apples, please.
- I bought a set of colours and a drawing book.

Read the given sentence.

- I borrowed just one book from the library.

We use one when we are talking about the quantity of something—one of a larger number.

- Hockey is a game of eleven players, not of one individual.

Read the given sentences and notice the difference in the use of a/an and one.

- What would you like? I'd like a mango. (not an apple)
- How many mangoes would you like? I'd like one mango. (not more than one mango)

3. Tick (✓) the most suitable answer.

a. How many books do you have on your desk?
   i. I have one book on my desk. ◯
   ii. I have a book on my desk. ◯

b. What do you have on your desk?
   i. I have one book on my desk. ◯
   ii. I have a book on my desk. ◯

c. What do you want to eat?
   i. I want to eat a sandwich. ◯
   ii. I want to eat one sandwich. ◯

d. How many sandwiches do you want to eat?
   i. I want to eat a sandwich. ◯
   ii. I want to eat one sandwich. ◯

e. How many teachers are there in the class?
   i. There is one teacher in the class. ◯
   ii. There is a teacher in the class. ◯

f. Who is there in the class?
   i. There is one teacher in the class. ◯
   ii. There is a teacher in the class. ◯

In this section, we will:
- learn how to use exclamation marks and frame exclamatory sentences. (C-3.4)

Punctuation

Exclamation marks

Exclamation marks are used to express strong feelings.
Example: "What a funny address!"
When Wendy said these words, she was expressing a strong feeling of surprise and confusion at Peter Pan's strange address.

1. Punctuate these sentences with exclamation marks and full stops.

a. You were excellent at the concert You must keep practising to do better

b. Wow That was a fantastic trick You are a wizard

c. Well done, Imjung Keep up the good work The debate team needs more students like you a.

2. Look at the pictures given below. Fill in the speech bubbles with exclamatory sentences.

b.

c.

d.

In this section, we will:
- learn how to write an informal letter in the proper format.
(C-3.1, C-3.2)

Write well

Letter to a friend

Imagine that you are Wendy and write a letter to a friend describing your meeting with Peter Pan. Follow the format given below for reference.

Darklings' House
14, Bloomsbury
Kensington Park Gardens
London.

24th February 20XX

Dear ..... (your friend's name),

Yours affectionately,
Wendy

Sender's address
Date
Salutation
Introductory sentences
Body
Closing sentences
Signature
Your name

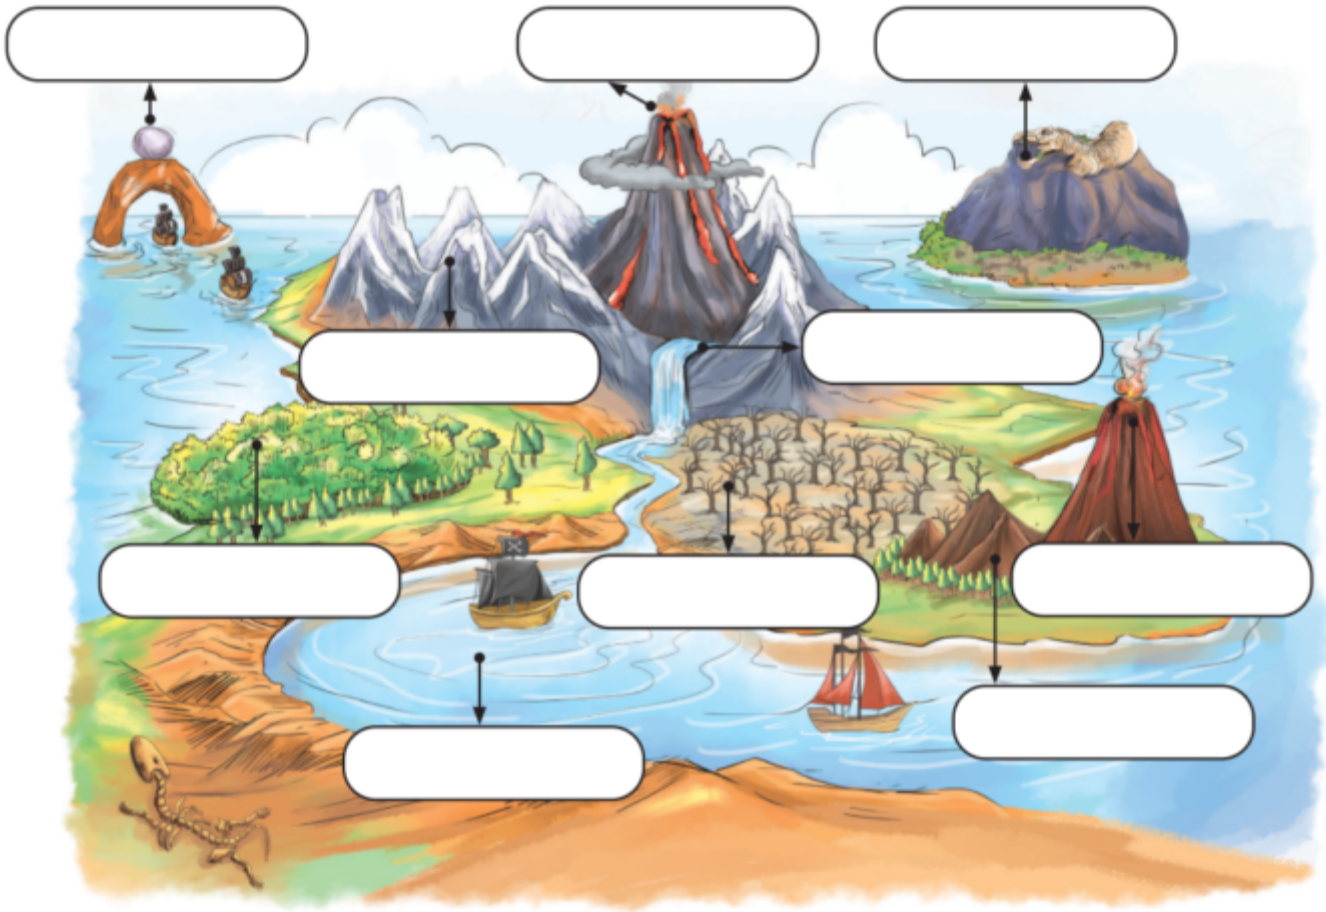
In this section, we will:
- listen carefully and locate specific details on a map.
- ask and answer questions to know more about each other.
(C-1.1, C-1.3, C-2.2)

Listen and speak well

1. When asked about Neverland's location, Peter innocently answers, "Second to the right, and then straight on till morning." This tells us that the geography of Neverland is magical, and way beyond our understanding.

   Let's explore the geography of a similar imaginary world—Foreverland. Look at the list of places and the imaginary map of Foreverland given on the next page. Listen closely to the audio and label the places on the map based on their descriptions.

Umber Peaks Russet Crest	Moonflower Forest Fauna Enclave	Whispering Cove Black Sails Cove	Monster Bay Crystal Falls	Celestia Mountains Ember Volcano



2. When Wendy and Peter meet each other for the first time, they introduced themselves and exchanged information about each other. Similarly, pair up with your partner and ask some questions to learn more about each other. Make notes if needed. Then, take turns in telling the rest of the class some interesting things about your partner. Here are a few questions you could start with.

a. What three words do you think best describe you?

b. What do you like to do on a Sunday?

c. What is your favorite place in the world?

d. If you could make one rule that everyone in the world had to follow, what rule would you make? Why?

e. If you travelled to outer space, what do you think you would see?

f. If you could invent one thing, what would it be?

g. Who is your hero?

h. What are you most proud of?