

Warm up

Let us make a paper snake. You will need:

- a paper plate
- coloured pencils
- a pair of scissors

Method

1. Take a paper plate.
2. Draw a spiral pattern on your paper plate starting from the edge and moving towards the centre.
In the centre, draw a snake's face as shown in the picture.
3. Draw polka dots over it using coloured pencils.
4. Cut the paper plate along the spiral line.
5. Pull from one end. Your paper snake is ready!

Do you like snakes? Here's a story about a girl named Cindy who had a snake—not a paper snake, but a real one ...

My name is Cynthia Ann, but I am called Cindy. I am nine years old and have a sister, Emily. She is twelve years old and she is really silly. She is afraid of spiders, white mice, frogs and snakes—especially snakes. But I think snakes are really great.

What does Cindy think of Emily?

One day last summer, when I was visiting my uncle's farm, I found a garter snake.

I caught it to take a good, close-up look. It was as long as my arm, and had three pale stripes and orange dots on its body. There were beautiful little blue slashes on its head. I called it Red Eye because it had red eyes.

My uncle told me to take it home and keep it as a pet. "No," I said, "Emily hates snakes. She is afraid of them because she thinks all of them are venomous."

"Nonsense," said my uncle. "A garter snake won't hurt anyone if it is handled properly."

"Oh, Emily wouldn't touch Red Eye," I said. "She'd scream and complain and carry on." Then, I stopped. I remembered the time Emily had refused to lend me her pocket money for Dad's birthday present. I thought of the time she had reported me for using her hairbrush to brush our dog. "On second thoughts," I said, "she might learn a lot from Red Eye."

So, my aunt gave me an empty coffee can and I poked little holes in the plastic lid. (The holes were little ones because my aunt told me that snakes are escape artists and can get out of just about anything.) Then, I took the garter snake home.

Which expression does Cindy use to show us that she has changed her mind about something?

My mother helped me to find my old fish tank in the garage. It was just the thing for a snake. It was fascinating to watch Red Eye eat. When I put a piece of raw fish in the tank, it would open its mouth very wide and swallow the piece whole.

Then for a day or two, you could see a large lump in Red Eye's body. The lump would get smaller and smaller as it went farther and farther down. Emily said it made her sick when I spoke of Red Eye's eating habits during dinner and once when I showed her the skin it had shed, she started to scream.

Emily didn't like Red Eye. But, I loved my snake. I know that all snakes stick out their tongues to smell things, but whenever I came around the tank, Red Eye would rise up and stick his tongue out as if to say hello.

garter snake: a harmless American snake with coloured lines along its back slashes: marks that look like slanting lines venomous: full of venom or poison handled properly: held and taken care of correctly poked: jabbed a finger into somebody/something escape artists: performers who can escape from difficult traps lump: a solid mass without a particular shape

Then one day, a terrible thing happened. When I went into my room after school, I noticed that the top of the tank was slightly open. Red Eye was gone! I screamed at the top of my voice and Mother came running into the room. "Somebody left the lid off the tank and Red Eye's gone!" I shouted.

"Oh, is that all?" Mother said thankfully. "You gave me a scare."

"Is that all? Is that all? At this moment, Red Eye is wandering around somewhere. It could starve to death, or a dog could get it." I wanted to cry.

At that moment, Emily came into the room. "You finally managed to get rid of Red Eye," I yelled at her. "I hope you are satisfied. I hope Red Eye crawls into your bed tonight."

Why do you think Cindy said she wanted Red Eye to crawl into Emily's bed?

"What do you mean?" Emily said. "I didn't do anything. I just got home from school." I was not going to believe her.

"All right, girls," Mother said. "We'll all look for Red Eye."

"I'm not looking for any snake," said Emily. I started to cry.

Emily looked at me in surprise. "You really like that snake, don't you?" she said. "Of course," I sniffed. "What did you think?"

"I thought you were keeping it just to be mean," said Emily.

I started to look for Red Eye. I didn't ever want to talk to my sister, Emily, again. Emily watched Mother and me for a while, and then she sighed.

"Well, if that snake means so much to you, I guess I'll help you," she said.

For hours we looked for Red Eye all over the house. We searched for it till dinner time. No Red Eye.

Emily came over and put her arm around my shoulders. "I'm sorry, Cindy," she said.

"We'll search for Red Eye again after dinner. You can't give up yet." Emily almost never touched me except to poke me. It made me feel sad to think that she was really not a bad person and that I had never known it.

While Mother, Father and I were watching television later that night, we suddenly heard the most awful screams coming from the bathroom. We rushed in that direction and there came Emily, running towards us.

wandering: going from one place to another with no particular aim starve: to become weak because there is not enough food to eat yelled: shouted sniffed: breathed in air through the nose while crying, in a way that makes a sound awful: terrible

She was holding a bunched-up towel in front of her. Even when she saw us, she didn't stop screaming. But, she dropped the towel and out slid Red Eye.

It took a while, but we finally calmed Emily down and she told us that she had opened the closet door in the bathroom and there was the garter snake, snuggled among the towels. When Red Eye saw Emily, it started to move. Emily knew that if she didn't get hold of it, it would get away.

After I got my snake back into the tank, safe and sound, I thanked Emily. She shuddered.

I knew it had been hard for her to touch a snake and I knew she had only done it for me. When spring comes around, I'm going to take Red Eye back to the farm and set it free. It will be safe and happy there and it will never have to try to escape again. It's the least I can do for Red Eye—and for Emily.

Cindy says that it was really hard for Emily to touch the snake. Which word in the story tells us this?

In this section, we will:

- remember details about the story.
- infer and interpret the main ideas of the story. (C-2.1, C-2.2, C-3.3)

Make connections

Map the story

The story gives us some interesting information about garter snakes. Create a fact file about garter snakes in your notebook using the format given below, and draw a picture too.

INFER

- b. Why did the speaker finally decide to help?

ANALYSE

- c. Briefly describe a situation where you or someone you know had to overcome a deep fear unexpectedly.

Read, reflect and write

1. Where did Cindy find Red Eye? What did it look like?
2. How did Cindy feel when Emily offered to look for Red Eye?
3. What did Cindy and Emily learn from Red Eye’s disappearance and the search for it?

Integrate

A habitat is a place where an animal lives, and gets its food, water and shelter from. It contains the suitable environmental conditions required for the animal’s survival.

Let’s explore the marine habitat of aquatic animals by creating a diorama. Do you know what an underwater diorama is? It is an artistic 3D model of a marine habitat depicting the sea creatures and aquatic plants often found there. Choose a marine animal. Find out about its habitat and eating habits, and create a diorama for it based on your findings. You may use an old shoe box to create the background of the diorama. Decorate it with sand and sea shells as well as cut-outs of colourful fish, seaweed and corals.

Crossword: Words related to reptiles

Read the descriptions given below and complete the crossword using words related to reptiles.

Reptiles are animals whose skin is covered with scales. They usually lay eggs.

ACROSS

- to wind into a series of circles
- to move smoothly over a surface, like a snake
- a large tropical snake that kills its prey by winding its long body tightly around them
- a large greyish-green lizard of tropical America
- a small lizard with wide feet, often found in warm countries
- the poisonous liquid produced by some snakes, spiders, etc.
- a large reptile with long tail, hard skin and big jaws, that lives near rivers and lakes, and is often found in America and China

DOWN

- two long, sharp teeth found in the front portion of the mouths of some animals
- a reptile with a round, hard shell that lives on land
- a small lizard that can change colour according to its surroundings
- a type of crocodile with a long, thin snout, often found in South Asia
- thin plates of hard material that cover the skin of many fish and reptiles

Homonyms

Emily uses the word mean three times in the story, but each time the word has a different meaning. Discuss these meanings with your teacher.

- “What do you mean?” Emily said. (intend to say)
- “I thought you were keeping it just to be mean,” said Emily. (unkind)
- “Well, if that snake means so much to you, I guess I’ll help you,” she said. (be important)

A homonym is a word that has the same spelling or pronunciation as another, but a different meaning.

Write two sentences with each of the following homonyms to show the difference in meaning between them.

- | | | | |
|---------|-----------|---------|---------|
| 1. bow | 2. drop | 3. duck | 4. seal |
| 5. wave | 6. second | 7. bank | 8. tie |

Order of adjectives

Read the given sentence.

- There were beautiful little blue slashes on its head.

The words beautiful, little and blue are adjectives.

When we use more than one adjective to describe something, it is often difficult to decide which one to place first. Here’s a table to help you place the adjectives in the right order.

In this section, we will:

- learn how to place adjectives in the correct order.
- learn how to form plural possessives. (C-3.4)

An adjective is a word that describes a noun or a pronoun.

	 Observation or opinion (what you notice or think)	 Size	 Shape	 How old	 Colour	 Origin or material from which something is made	 Noun
I want a		large	square		white		envelope.
I like wearing my	warm			new		woollen	coat.
Look at that	sweet, juicy				red		apple.
I have a		small	round			Swiss	clock.

These rules are not absolute. The order can sometimes be different. For instance, we sometimes prefer to put a short adjective before a long one.

Example: the big friendly giant

Equal adjectives which belong to the same category should be separated by commas.

Example: My grandmother is a strong, wise lady. (observation/opinion)

1. Put a tick (✓) against the option that has adjectives in the correct order.

a. i. Persian juicy orange melons ☐

ii. juicy orange Persian melons ☐

iii. Persian orange juicy melons ☐

c. i. a large square earthen flowerpot ☐

ii. a square large earthen flowerpot ☐

iii. a large earthen square flowerpot ☐

b. i. a tattered old plastic red umbrella ☐

ii. a red old plastic tattered umbrella ☐

iii. a tattered old red plastic umbrella ☐

d. i. a bright cotton blue tee shirt ☐

ii. a bright blue cotton tee shirt ☐

iii. a blue cotton bright tee shirt ☐

2. Rewrite the sentences using the adjectives given in brackets in the correct order.

- The woman bought that house. (stone, square, grey)
- We saw a butterfly in the garden. (yellow, beautiful, African)
- We are having ice cream! (strawberry, delicious, pink)
- Ali is wearing a hat. (straw, new, large)

Plural possessives

We use 's for forming possessive nouns of singular verbs.

Examples: the musician's violin the girl's pet

Rules for forming plural possessives

We use ' and 's to show belonging or ownership.

- we use ' with a plural noun ending in -s:

the girls' pet

belongs to two or more girls

- we use 's with other plural nouns that do not end in -s:

the children's toys

belongs to two or more children

ANCHOR

In the sentences given below, circle the nouns that show plural possession.

1. A peacock's young ones are called peachicks.
2. The octopus' tentacles have suction cups.
3. The boys' grandfather is visiting them today.
4. We must respect other people's beliefs.
5. The kangaroo's tail helps it to balance when it leaps.
6. The hippopotamus's plump body balances on four stumpy legs.
7. The fishermen's nets are full of shrimp.
8. Charles Dickens's novels are very popular.

Punctuation

Apostrophe (')

In this section, we will:

- learn to use apostrophe to show possession and make contractions. (C-3.4)

An apostrophe is used to show possession

Examples:

the bee's hive
(singular)

the bees' hive
(plural)

in place of missing letters or numbers in contractions

Examples: do + not = don't are + not = aren't would + not = wouldn't
'17 (for 2017)

A contraction is a short form of a word (or set of numbers) in which one or more letters (or numbers) have been omitted or left out. The apostrophe shows this omission.

When we use a contraction, we must place an apostrophe where the omitted letter(s) or number(s) would have been.

Here are some common contractions.

aren't I'm he's they're you're I'd don't she'd they'd isn't I've they've won't can't couldn't hasn't mustn't doesn't

Let us read some commonly confused words. Note the difference between the following pairs of words.

Its	The puppy wagged its tail.	possessive
It's	It's too hot to go outside.	contraction
Your	May I borrow your book?	possessive
You're	You're late for the play.	contraction
Their	They invited their friends to the party.	possessive
They're	They're waiting at the bus stop.	contraction
Whose	Whose dog is that?	possessive
Who's	Who's your favourite author?	contraction

Insert apostrophes in the correct places.

1. The horses manes were brushed and plaited, werent they?
2. I dont like that dog. Its fierce bark keeps me awake all night.
3. The childrens toys are scattered all over the floor. Its not right.
4. Its a three-day journey up the mountain.
5. This book isnt yours. Youve borrowed mine.

In this section, we will:

- write a narrative composition based on a personal anecdote. (C-3.1, C-3.2, C-3.3)

Write well

Narrative composition

We read about Cindy's relationship with her sister, Emily. Write a short narrative composition about your relationship with your brother, sister or cousin. You may use the prompts below. Illustrate your essay with a photograph or a drawing of the person you have written about.

First paragraph: Introduce yourself and your brother/sister/cousin. Give a brief description.

Second paragraph: In what ways are you similar or different? How do you annoy or tease each other?

Third paragraph: Write an anecdote to show how, despite your differences, you support each other.

Last paragraph: Conclude your composition by saying what good things you would wish for the person.

What is an anecdote?

It is a brief story about someone's personal experience. It may be interesting or funny. It usually gives an example, makes a point or has a deeper meaning.

Listen and speak well

In this section, we will:

- listen to a dairy routine to complete missing details.
- create a timetable and answer questions based on it.

(C-1.1, C-1.3, C-3.3)

1. Listen carefully to Cindy outlining her schedule for the day, and fill in the blanks.

- Wake up at 6:30 a.m.
- _____ from 7 a.m. to 7:20 a.m.
- Have breakfast at _____.
- Off to school by _____.
- Lesson time from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Art and _____ classes are also during this time.
- Have lunch at 2 p.m. when I return home.
- _____ and rest after lunch till 4 p.m.
- Play football from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m.
- Homework and revision for _____ hours from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.
- After studies, it's recreation time! Listen to music and play chess until dinner time.
- Eat _____ at 8:30 p.m.
- Read in bed till lights are put out at 10 p.m.

2. Now, create a timetable for yourself in your notebook. Give yourself enough time to study and play, for recreation and for rest. After this, answer the questions that the teacher asks you about your timetable. You may use the prompts given below to answer the questions.

I work out regularly in the morning from ... to ...

In the evenings,
I usually ...

I do my homework at ...

I have ... for breakfast.

I like going to/for ...
